

CALL FOR PAPERS AND RELATED SUBMISSIONS

Journal of Human Resources Education

The Journal of Human Resources Education is a quarterly, open access, peer-reviewed journal dedicated to supporting and improving the teaching of human resources management in colleges and universities. JHRE focuses on strategies, techniques, and resources that enhance the teaching of human resource concepts and practices.

Now in its 12th year of publication, JHRE seeks submissions in the following areas:

- Exercises and cases that can be used to illustrate key HRM concepts
- Topical reviews/discussion of significant human resource concepts/practices or contemporary issues that could be used to supplement other course materials
- Research or reviews that discuss effective or innovative classroom or online teaching methods in human resources management
- Resource reviews (e.g., books, videos, computer tools)
- Practitioner commentaries about the content of HRM education or issues facing the practice of human resource management
- Interviews with HR executives concerning significant HR issues
- Other conceptual or practical materials that enhance the presentation and learning of subjects related to human resources management

Please refer to the journal's website (<http://journals.troy.edu/index.php/jhre>) for additional information about the journal and submission procedures. JHRE is listed in Cabell's Directory of Publishing Opportunities in Management.
